Liss Ard Estate was built in 1853, a year after the Irish famine, by the O'Donovan's, an Anglo-Irish family from Co. Limerick. The estate was originally over 3,000 acres. Glen Teigh (Lake House) was built in the 1870s as a summer residence for the family. In 1924 The O'Donovan's sold Liss Ard estate including the 3,000 acres of land and retired to Devon in England.

John and Mary-Ellen Connolly bought the estate in 1924 and raised their 4 daughters there until just after the second world war in 1947. John refused British Prime Minister Churchill's request for wood for the war effort in the early 1940s, thus preserving trees for future generations to enjoy.

In 1976 Bachmann purchased Liss Ard Estate as a front for the Swiss government and ran it as an equestrian center and country hotel. It was bought by the Swiss government as part of the long-term strategy of the highly secretive 'Stay behind organisation'. West Cork was seen as an ideal location for a safe house for the Swiss government in case of invasion or nuclear attack.

In 1989, Veith Turske, a German art dealer ran the Estate for Swiss investors. Turske invited James Turrell to visit the estate in 1989 and shortly thereafter Turrell moved to Liss Ard Estate and began work on the Sky Garden which was completed in 1992.

Further renovations took place more recently with extensive renovations taking place throughout the estate, now furnished in a modern country style and divided between three buildings, each with its unique character.
